

Host family stays

Share a flat with friends

Belgium is the country in Europe with the highest property-ratio. This means that around 80 percent of Belgians do not rent houses, but actually own them.

Once their own children grow old enough to buy their own house some families are glad to welcome students or short to mid-term tourists in their houses. The advantages for you as a language student are obvious:

- ✓ Experience how Belgians really live
- ✓ Even though you have your own room, you will never feel alone when you come home or if you have a problem
- ✓ You get the possibility to practice your language directly with the family

If you decide to go on this adventure for one of multiple friends, you might want to share an apartment in order to spend even more time together. By taking your own flat you can cook and eat together in the evening, watch a movies together etc...

Throughout the last couple of years the EULC could build up a good network with landlords that rent apartments in almost every neighborhood of the European capital and all major student cities:

The typical Belgian "Kot"

University residence

Alice (21), Ghent

"Since I started my studies, I have been living in what we Belgians call a "kot". We currently share a house with six students, two of them are spending their ERASMUS in Ghent. The good thing is that everybody is more or less in the same mood. There's a time for everything: If we party, we party together but if we study we study together as well."

In the major Belgian university cities you will see that entire neighborhoods are in the students' hand. This leads to a cozy atmosphere and adapted prices for food, drinks, hairdressers and so on... In Louvain-La-Neuve, the probably most particular students' city, the entire city administration (cultural events, environment, festivals etc...) is taken care of by so called "Kots à projets" (Project kots) in which groups of students plan and work on their projects throughout the year.

Every Belgian university has its own students' residences in which students can live close to the campus at affordable prices.

In general every residence offers multiple different kind of accommodations. The range can vary from a one room apartments to a ten or even twelve room apartment.

Student residences can mostly only be booked for either ten months throughout the year (September – June) , or the two months of summer vacations (July – August).

The European Language Center's accommodation service has the right contacts if you need assistance to find an appropriate room in Belgium that fits to your needs.

Prices depend on the city, the period as well as the type of accommodation you opt for. The following prices can be taken as an indication, however we cannot guarantee availability.
